

Sea Delivers Up Two More Victims of S-51

Divers Bring Up Bodies of Walter Edwards Lawton and Brady D. Lindsay—Open Door Leading Into Motor Room Signifies End of Attempts to Raise Sunken Submarine—Believe Remainder Perished in Their Bunks.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New London, Ct., Oct. 2.—The sea surrendered two more bodies from the S-51. Risking their lives to do so divers brought forth from the engine room the remains of Walter Edwards Lawton, electrician's mate first class, of 148 Sea street, Weymouth, Mass., and Brady D. Lindsay, engineer 2nd, of 525 Grove street, Pensacola.

The discovery of the open door leading into the motor room spelled the end of all attempts to raise the S-51 crew, officers admitted.

"They are all dead in there," declared Lieutenant Commander Flannigan sadi. It is the end, merely as a matter of formality plans went ahead for the testing of the forward torpedo section for air. It was the prevalent opinion among the rescue workers that if the crew had been unable to close the aft's motor door the same applied to the torpedo compartment.

Remainder Perished in Bunks.
The two bodies found in the engine room were supposedly members of the crew on watch. It was surmised the remainder of the crew perished in their bunks.

Those who were awakened by the shock of the crash were not able to gain the door, divers deduced.

It was questionable whether the divers would attempt to enter the motor room to search for bodies as the hazard to the diver in crossing the threshold in his cumbersome outfit was regarded as great.

"Enough Death," Says Christy.
"We have had enough of death," remarked Admiral Christy, obviously effected by the definite news that all hope was gone.

Nevertheless, each of the eight divers volunteered to go down into the death chamber to retrieve the victims.

Body 15 Miles Away.
A body was recovered after having been washed ashore today at Kenyon's Wharf, Stonington, fifteen miles from here. Officials announced the body was not that of a member of the crew as was first believed.

Wreckers Sent Back.
Admiral Christy sent a message to the submarine base which read:

"Divers have entered engine room through engine room hatch and found motor room door open. Plan to burn small exploring hole in torpedo room today to determine whether it is flooded or not. Recommend release of Monarch and Century as I can foresee no possible use of them in rescue operations."

Bugler Blows Taps.
When word of the open door to the motor room through which death ruled, reached the naval base, all work was stopped. Gob and officers alike doffed their caps and bowed their heads as a bugler blew taps.

With the sending back of the two giant cranes which after the forward torpedo room was officially tested rescue operations would cease and the more deliberate salvaging process be arranged for.

Engine Room Flooded.
The last flicker of hope that anyone remained alive aboard the underwater boat was extinguished when divers reported the engine room was flooded. A pressure gauge inserted into a small hole in the out shell of the compartments hatch revealed this condition. It was considered probable that the motor compartment was likewise flooded.

The descent into the hitherto unexplored engine room was expected to lead to the discovery of bodies. The position of the victims will explain whether they died in peaceful slumber or fought for life.

Watch For Floating Bodies.
Acting on the statement of Alfred Galt, one of the three survivors, that four men were washed from the submarine deck when the steamer City of Rome rammed the S-51, submarine base officials and the United States coast guard broadcast a request along the New England coast to watch out for floating bodies.

Some Tossed Into Sea.
When the S-51 finally reveals her true secret, some officials believe there may be a number of the thirty-one missing members of the crew unaccounted for. The fact that the vessel was ripped open amidships, it was pointed out, may have caused some of the crew to be tossed into the sea.

Arrival of Admiral Beuret.
Admiral J. B. Beuret, chief construction officer of the navy was due to arrive here this afternoon from Washington. Admiral Beuret will survey conditions at the scene of the wreck and report to Secretary of Navy Willard. Upon his recommendation, it was understood future salvaging or rescue operations will be decided.

Rodgers Favors A Separate Corps

But is Unalterably Opposed to a Unified Air Service As Recommended By Colonel Mitchell—Denies Charges Made By Mitchell.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Oct. 2.—Commander John Rodgers today indignantly denied before the president air board that the unsuccessful, PN-9 Honolulu flight was the work of "bungling amateurs" as charged by Colonel "Billy" Mitchell.

The man, including himself, who handled the flight, were all qualified aeronautical experts, with years of experience in the air, Rodgers said.

"My record shows that I am both a qualified aviator and navigator," added Rodgers.

Rodgers said he was "unalterably opposed" to a unified air service, as recommended by Mitchell, but he did advocate a separate corps within the navy.

"That scheme" said Rodgers, referring to the unified air service, "would defeat the very purpose for which it was organized."

"Navy flyers should be trained with the fleet, as an integral part of the navy,"

Rodgers advocated drastic changes in the navy itself to improve aviation.

"This could be done without any great upheaval that would cause heart burnings and discontent," he said. "We want to better aviation, but we want to stay in the navy, and not be taken out and unified with all other air forces."

"I think naval aviation should have a separate promotion list and separate budget."

In this respect, Rodgers endorsed the views of every other naval pilot who testified before the board, including Captain George C. Westervelt, manager of the naval air craft factory, Philadelphia, who presented a definite plan for a separate air corps in the navy.

"I think, however, added Rodgers, "that an aviator should be given a rest about every five years and assigned to duty other than flying."

FRIENDS DENY ENGAGEMENT OF WILSON'S WIDOW
By Telegram to The Freeman.
Washington, Oct. 2.—Quasi denials of rumors of an engagement between Mrs. Edith Bolling Wilson, widow of the late war president, and Dr. Sterling Ruffin, capital physician, came today from friends of both.

Mrs. Wilson is now in Europe, where she has been attending the sessions of the League of Nations.

Rufie Bolling, brother of Mrs. Wilson, declared there was no truth in the rumors of his sister's engagement to Dr. Ruffin.

At Dr. Ruffin's office, it was said he had "not the slightest comment" to make on the rumors.

The friendship between Dr. Ruffin and Mrs. Wilson is of long standing. He was one of the physicians who attended President Wilson in his last illness. He is a bachelor and well known in capital social circles.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
London, Oct. 2.—Rumors of war preparations as the result of the Mosul situation met with steadfast denials in official circles today.

Opponents of the British policy in Iraq and Mosul have made the most of these rumors, and the Baldwin government is doing its utmost to persuade the public that there is no cause for alarm.

First Hearing On Equalization Appeal of City

Deputy State Tax Commissioner Spratt Holds Initial Hearing on Appeal of Kingston City from Supervisors' Rating of 100 Per Cent on Equalization.

The first hearing before the State Tax Commission on the appeal of the city of Kingston from the equalization as placed by the equalization committee of the board of supervisors for the year 1924 was argued Thursday before Deputy Commissioner Daniel R. Spratt at the court house. Prior to that year the equalization committee of the board had given the city of Kingston a rating of 100 per cent while the committee that year reduced it to 93 per cent, a drop of seven points.

County Attorney John W. Eckert appeared for the board of supervisors. Judge Jenkins as corporation counsel for the city and Judge John G. Van Etten for the town of Olive.

Testimony was taken by the commissioner. Supervisors Clerk Henry R. DeWitt and Supervisor Edward Young of Marlborough and Supervisor John C. Shults of Saugerties were sworn.

A motion to dismiss, made by County Attorney Eckert, was denied by the commissioner. An offer to stipulate that values be determined by actual sales was made by Judge Jenkins and was refused by the county.

The State Tax Commission will select representative parcels of land for appraisal and when this selection is made will report to the city and county representatives what parcels have been selected. Both the city and the county will have appraisers view these parcels and fix a valuation and the appraisers will then appear before the Tax Commission and testify. Not more than two witnesses will be sworn on any one parcel. The selection of the several parcels will take some time and will necessitate the Commission sending men here to select representative parcels.

The contention of the city of Kingston is that city property is assessed at 100 per cent of its value and that there should be no reduction made by the equalization committee of the board of supervisors as was done in 1924 when the committee cut the city to 93 per cent.

Under the system which the tax commission has adopted in placing equalization values on property the city of Kingston is rated at 60 per cent.

The matter was adjourned subject to the call of the State Tax Commission.

League's Baby Welfare Work In Kingston Dependent in Large Way for Funds Received from Big Social Event.

The Junior League ball for the past two years has been one of the outstanding successes of the social season. This year, on the night of Friday, October 30, the League is planning not only to equal but to excel the two previous affairs.

In assuring the continuance of the League's work in supporting a Baby Welfare Nurse and Baby Clinics, the public is investing in the most effective kind of insurance. All investments in insurance are investments in future security of one kind or another, and better insurance of the future prosperity of the city of Kingston is assured through establishing the health and welfare of its future citizens on a sound basis.

Vital as is this work among pre-school age children, it is being carried on by no other organization. Mrs. Lois age children, it is being carried on duty, ably carrying on and expanding this work which was started three years ago by the League.

October 30 should be a gala night for socially nothing more brilliant than the Junior League balls, have been enjoyed during the seasons in which they occurred, and from the point of view of charity, no organization could be more worthy of support than the Junior League with its work among the babies of the city.

Armano's alleged plan of manufacture was to raise $1 bills to $20 in such expert fashion as to make them readily passable, according to the federal agents.

ITALY UNRUFFLED BY FRENCH DEBT FAILURE
By Telegram to The Freeman.
Rome, Oct. 2.—Italy is unruined by the failure of the Franco-American debt negotiations.

The Italian debt mission to the United States will sail as planned upon October 20, with Count Volpi, finance minister, heading the mission. It was announced.

Italy, like France, is prepared to reconsider her refusal to take up her $4,000,000,000 war debt on terms akin to those that seven other debtor nations already have found acceptable.

While the manner in which the tempestuous week of negotiations was ended here was not conducive to undue optimism, administration officials generally felt confident today that the negotiations will be resumed before the expiration of the five year period.

They believe that when the shouting and recrimination dies down, and France comes to a sober realization of what failure to settle this debt means to France's credit in the world, and to the stability of the franc, the responsible leaders of French economic thought will compel renewed efforts at settlement.

Discourage Loans to France.
Meanwhile, it is assured that no encouragement will be given American bankers to extend any new loans to France, which she now needs so badly to consolidate her internal debt, and bring order out of the chaos into which an unbalanced budget and a ragged taxation system has brought her national finances.

While there is no law under which the government can prevent Wall Street from floating an international loan, an administration frown has usually operated to stop such ventures in the past, and undoubtedly will do so in the future. If not, there may be set up legislative machinery which will enable the government to put a check rein on foreign invasions of the American investment field. The present temper of Congress is such that legislation could be put through in a twinkling. In fact, an effort may be made in the forthcoming session to do just this, irrespective of administration encouragement.

Lump Sum Stationary.
Belief prevailed in Washington today that both the foreign parliament and the American Congress will ratify the temporary truce agreement when M. Caillaux is bearing back to Paris. It provides that for the next five years France will pay $40,000,000 annually, this amount to be considered "current interest" on the entire debt, leaving the lump sum of $4,200,000,000 remaining stationary.

Expect Opposition.
Similarly, administration officials believe it will be ratified by Congress, although not without some opposition and some caustic oratory. Some of the senators whose feelings are bitter over the subject of the French debt plan to point out that this five year truce has been extended to France at a direct cost to the American taxpayer of approximately $135,000,000 a year, or $775,000,000 for the five years. These figures represent the difference between the $40,000,000 France will pay annually, and the $175,000,000 that American taxpayers are putting up each year as interest on the liberty loans represented by the French debt.

The five year pact with France, however, will be lumped in with the Belgian, Polish, Latvian and other settlements, when Congress convenes, and ratification secured en bloc, under present plans.

No Cause for Regret.
Members of the American debt commission, collectively and individually felt today that they had no cause for regret at failure to reach a understanding with M. Caillaux. They pointed out that they asked the French government to pay to more on its American indebtedness than M. Caillaux has already agreed to pay on France's indebtedness to Great Britain. In fact, not nearly as much.

In marked contrast to the buoyant manner in which he arrived in Washington predicting a settlement within a week, M. Caillaux departed this morning for New York. He will sail for France tonight.

The French finance minister of course was not at all as was his colleague.

Mortgage Burned By "Y" Workers

Ashes to be Preserved as Reminder Never to Give Another Mortgage Unless for Erection of New $100,000 Building.

The remnants of the Y. M. C. A. mortgage were burned today at the luncheon of workers who are trying to raise a fund of $25,000 for the purpose of paying other debts and paying running expenses.

President Charles Ramsey lit a match and started the incineration under the supervision of William C. DeWitt who presided at the exercises. Later it was resolved that the ashes be placed in an urn and kept as a reminder to never place another mortgage on the property—unless it be for the erection of a $100,000 building to house the Boys' Work department. Singing of "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow" accompanied the burning.

After seeing the last spark expire President Ramsey hurried away on the beginning of his trip to New Zealand while the audience, remaining standing, sang, "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow."

Another high spot in the proceedings was the arrival of a large delegation of officials of women's organizations who, headed by an American flag, did a walk around the gallery before descending to the dining room, a pianist playing "Onward Christian Soldiers." These ladies, headed by Mrs. Frank Thompson, constitute a new team to solicit pledges.

Frank W. Powley delivered a brief and inspiring speech on doing things that a lot of folks predict cannot be done, citing instances such as the original campaign for $75,000 and the building of The Governor Clinton Hotel.

Pledges were increased by $1,573, making the total thus far reported $13,981.25, so there is more than $11,000 to raise in order to make the campaign a success.

Although Captain Eltinge led in the amount of pledges reported, no obeisance was made to him, the master of ceremonies possibly having forgotten this in the heat of asserting that perhaps he talked too much.

Pledges reported today were as follows:

GANG BATTLES THEN AND NOW

In Old Days Toughs Would Scorn to Draw Gun on Policeman.

New York.—Two men emerged from an uptown cafe at an early morning hour and hastened down the avenue. Seeing them and sensing a holdup, a policeman commanded them to halt. Instead of obeying they broke into a run with the officer in pursuit. Again he called to them to halt and sent a warning bullet after them. The two paused in their flight and returned his fire, and a bullet struck him in the leg and laid him low. Nevertheless, he picked himself up and continued the chase.

A brother officer, hearing the shots, joined in the pursuit. He, too, was fired upon, bullet passing through the sleeve of his coat. The two ruffians escaped into a neighboring tenement. It was then learned that they had held up the cafe and a score of patrons.

It is a common experience for a policeman to look upon the bright face of danger for, to quote Cicero, "What a day will bring forth is uncertain," and conditions now are particularly strenuous. Until a few years ago a policeman seldom thought of his gun. It was a bold man indeed who would "pull a gun on a cop" and as a rule only a desperate criminal would dare do such a thing unless he were cornered. In recent years gun-toters have become more reckless, consequently a policeman keeps his service revolver cleaned and well oiled and ready for action, and he devotes more time to target practice in the department shooting gallery. He wants to be able to meet trouble if it comes his way.

Overrun by Toughs.

"When I joined the force," said a gray-haired veteran, "the city was far from being a paradise. We had Hell's Kitchen and there were certain parts of Ninth and Tenth avenues that were not exactly genteel. These neighborhoods were overrun by tough gangs, which delighted in making a cop's life miserable. You had to be a pretty tough fellow yourself to hold down your post, and it was common for cops to be sent to the hospital by these hoodlums. Yet, as I recall it, they seldom used guns in their fights and encounters with cops. "Usually they fought with their fists and it was considered a most serious breach of etiquette to draw a gun. They would not hesitate to attack you with fists, bricks and stones, and they delighted in toppling a chimney on top of you. In those days, you see, physical strength was the prime requisite of a gangster and the gang leader was a fellow who was the best rough-and-tumble fighter in the neighborhood."

"If you were a rooky cop the captain would look you over, and if you were a big strapping fellow he would assign you to one of the tough spots in the precinct. If you expected to retain that post, you would have to let the gang know right at the start that you intended to be 'boss.' This was in effect a challenge. When they saw they could not intimidate you and you would not stand for any of their nonsense, they would declare war against you, and would resort to every means to discourage you."

"When Jeff Buckley, who was killed several years ago by the negro Bode, was a rooky policeman he was assigned to cover a tough post. The neighborhood was infested by a gang of rowdies who were making life miserable for everybody. They had their 'hangout' in an old stable and when Jeff notified them that they would have to mend their ways they only scoffed. Entering the stable he informed them bluntly they would have to change their camp. There were six of them present, all big powerful fellows."

"If you didn't have that gun and club with you," sneered one of the gangsters, "you wouldn't dare come in here."

He Showed Them.

Buckley was incensed at the slur. "I'll tell you what I'll do," he said. "I'll fight every man of you one right after the other." The challenge was accepted. Though not above the average height, he was one of the strongest men in the department and an excellent boxer. Stripping off his coat, he was ready for the fray. His first antagonist was the most burly of the lot. Him he whipped in short order, and the others fell easy victims to the terrific hammering which he administered to them. When the brief battle was over they were a sorry lot, with black eyes and swollen jaws."

"In the old gas-house district there were some tough gangsters. They would hold mixed-salo parties which would last for days, and when they were on these prolonged debauches they would get to fighting among themselves and the police would be summoned to quell the fray. We used to go into these mixed-salo saloons cautiously with our backs against the wall, for if they caught you unaware they would crown you with a chair or anything that came handy. But bad as they were they would not resort to gun or knife. To use such weapons was unethical and their code of warfare forbade it. They gloried in their physical prowess. Though it might be fair to bounce a club on a cop's dome, a revolver was intended for washings only."

Starved as Sculptor, He Recoups as Plasterer

Los Angeles, Cal.—Once upon a time he fashioned the statues of three nations. Now, Humberto Pedretti, world-renowned Italian sculptor, is keeping the "wolf from the door" by working as a day laborer—a decorative plasterer.

"Even for the sake of my beloved art I could not permit my wife and five children to starve," he smiled, taking another dab of cement and applying it to the interior wall of an office building.

Pedretti, once the toast of kings and queens who posed at his bidding, now takes orders from a red-faced construction foreman.

"It is too bad, though, my friend, for an artist to be subjected to this," he paused and then pointed to the freshly plastered wall. "It is atrocious but the American's apparent dislike for art has driven me to it."

"Americans like tawdry art. Something that is decorative but cheap. "Something that is true and fine—a piece of stone that is in truth the sepulchre of an artist's soul—poof! Very nice, they say, but that is all. They won't buy it. Too much money, they cry."

Declares Indian Was First American Chemist

Los Angeles, Cal.—James A. Brangan of Philadelphia put the Indian on a pedestal of science at the American Chemical society's sessions here with the declaration that the aborigine was the first chemist on this continent.

The Indian, he said, knew nothing of chemistry and geology as we understand these terms, but he was quick to take advantage of chemical combinations and geological conditions in his surroundings.

To prove his point the speaker cited his method of making flint arrowheads, spears and knives by using a piece of bone secured or rubbed in ash and water. He also pointed to the Indian's ability to tan hides, make glue from fish scales, waterproof canoe seams with pitch, temper clay for pottery and dye his clothing.

On the subject of the nation's food supply Dr. Charles H. Merri of New York declared that chemistry had forever freed this country from the danger of a sugar shortage by the production of a sweetening substance from corn.

Wily Butcher Knew

What He Was About

A good story is told in Tamworth, Warwickshire, England, whence came originally the famous Tamworth herd of swine. During the year 1808 a gentleman was exhibiting at the door of an inn a trotting mare, when a butcher of the town, stepping up, offered to trot his black pony against her for $125. A smile of contempt was the only notice he at first received. However, the knight of the cleaver persisting in his original offer, the bet was accepted, and the next morning appointed for the match, four miles out of the town. The butcher appeared at the starting post mounted on his black pony with his tail in front of him and brandishing a small unwarlike bone. He was allowed the start when immediately afterward, as his competitor was rapidly passing him, he rattled a flourish upon his tray, which had the instantaneous effect of frightening the high-mettled mare into a gallop. This was repeatedly the case, and as often, according to the etiquette of trotting matches, was the two hasty mare obliged to stop and turn round. Thus, ultimately, the black pony won in hollow fashion.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By Mary Graham Bonner

TWO-HORNED RHINO

"There are people who think it's fun," said the Two-Horned Rhinoceros, "to kill wild animals. They don't need us for food, they don't kill us because we are hurting them or their homes or their children. They kill for the sake of killing—or they call it just for sport."

"That is quite dreadful to my way of thinking," said the Indian Rhinoceros, "and my family have suffered in the same way yours have over in Africa."

"I am glad I am in the zoo, and I like the keeper," said the Two-Horned Rhinoceros.

"Then, too, he likes me, which makes it doubly pleasant. It would be singly pleasant if one of us liked the other, but to have each of us like each other is doubly pleasant, as I said."

"He says I am so nice and gentle and tame."

"I know he likes you," said the Indian Rhinoceros, "I also have some good news for you."

"What is it?" asked the Two-Horned Rhinoceros.

"They say," began the Indian Rhinoceros, "that the boys of today aren't going to care for hunting and killing for the sake of hunting and killing. They're going to feel ashamed of themselves if they hunt big game for no other reason than to see them drop down and know their lives are over, and that it is because of what they have done."

"They say that boys are growing to like animals more and to care for them."

"They say that they're finding out how interesting they really are."

"They say, too, that they are enjoying studying about them, rather than just killing them and seeing them that way."

"Then, too, I have heard that boys care more for a camera which takes pictures of animals than they do for a gun which kills animals."

"By taking pictures, by being patient, they are going to find it much more worth while than just hunting. Oh, it is good news I've been hearing lately, and I know it is true."

"You see I have heard the keeper talk, and I have heard the boys talk. I have heard boys say that they no longer thought it was big and splendid to kill animals, but that they thought

"I Am Glad I Am in the Zoo."

It was the most interesting thing in the world to know animals."

"Oh, Indian Rhinoceros," said the Two-Horned Rhinoceros, "what good news you have told me, and I'll smile my best two-horned rhinoceros smile on every person I see from now on!"

"When I speak of my best two-horned rhinoceros smile, I do not mean that I smile a two-horned kind of a smile, for I couldn't do that."

"Besides a two-horned smile means nothing at all."

"But I am a two-horned rhinoceros—that is my name—and I, the two-horned rhinoceros, am going to smile my best smile."

"That is what I mean."

"I feel quite confident," said the Indian Rhinoceros, "that the people will feel rewarded when they see your best smile."

"I feel quite sure of that."

"I, too, will smile upon them with my best smile."

"Ah," said the Two-Horned Rhinoceros, "won't they be pleased to receive rhinoceros smiles. They are used to smiles of people, and of each other, I should say, but they don't receive the smiles of a two-horned and an Indian rhinoceros all the time."

"In fact, such smiles will be both rare and unusual for them to receive. Their families smile upon them often, they smile at each other lots of times, but we aren't around to smile at them when they get up in the morning or when they go to bed at night."

"So they'll get smiles when they come to the zoo. That, I do hope, will be a treat."

"I certainly hope they will feel that way about our best smiles."

'Ask For Dave' News

D. KANTROWITZ, KINGSTON.

The days are getting shorter and colder and now we ask you, "How about that suit?"

Men—if there is any particular suit that you are looking for—see us. We don't care what sort of a style you want, what shade, what material or what price—we have it.

Our prices start at $12.85. That's low enough for any suit. Then they continue up to any price you want to go.

Many people are surprised at the values we give. That's a fact. It's due to our big buying power. Do you realize that we have approximately 1,000 suits on hand? Do you realize that we must have a reason for this? Naturally. We sell so many suits because we use our customers' "honest."

Any suit that we sell you is guaranteed to do just what we tell you.

We have no written guarantee. Why? Well, we feel that if a person won't take our word we would rather not sell him.

We don't need the backing of a "piece of paper" to help us sell our suits for we have a wonderful lot of customers and everyone takes our word for they know we stand back of everything we say.

And Topcoats—if you need one, stop in and see us. We have some real, neat numbers and it will pay you to look them over.

And of course every variety of Overcoats on hand—

But will change the subject and talk about our Hunting Outfits. We supply the hunter with everything from head to foot except guns.

Duck Breeches that will not rip. Extra heavy numbers for $2.98. Then a waterproof duck with a woolen lining that sure is appreciated in this cold weather, at $2.98.

And Hunting Coats—say, we have a dandy number with, I don't know how many pockets, which are large and roomy and reinforced with taped seams. These sell at $5.95.

And hunting shirts of plaids, woollens and flannels, and heavy socks, and caps, etc.

Then, Hunting Boots, featuring one number with a composition sole, and a soft, pliable upper about 16 or 18 inches high, that sells at $6.50.

And anything else that you may need in the hunting line can be found here.

Now then, how about some Fall Sportswear?

We have any variety of Sport Sweater Coats.

In plaids—in wide vertical blazer stripes—in corduroy numbers—suede cloth effects—in guaranteed suede materials—in buckskin cloth—and in any other sort of new idea.

We start these at $2.98 and continue up to the guaranteed, suede $15 coat that we are putting out at $11.85.

Remember—we have a cheaper coat with knitted collar and bottom at $1.95 but this is of fleece-lined material and we will not misrepresent anything we sell in this store, so we are not advertising this as imitation Suede as they are being advertised.

We have just received some fancy new Imported Woolen Hose and they are surely true Collegiate Hose. They sell at $1.00.

Stop in and see our variety of over 25 dozen sweaters for any purpose for all the family.

We will soon start telling you about our rubber stock. You probably do not know that we have the largest stock of Guaranteed First Quality Rubber in this city.

We will see you some more.

Pay us a visit.

Protect Beautiful Birds

Birds of paradise are found in New Guinea, Molucca Islands and a few other neighboring islands; also in southeastern Australia. Egrets range from the United States south to southern South America; from central Europe south to southern Africa; and from north central Asia south to Australia. Egrets are afforded protection under the treaty between the United States and Great Britain for the protection of birds migrating between the United States and Canada and may not be killed, sold or possessed except for scientific purposes. The importation of both birds of paradise and egret for their plumage is prohibited by the tariff act of 1922.

What Are Really Needed

A farmer's wife sat reading a farm journal and, as she had exegesis, or, rather, engaged her spectacles, she had to hold the paper at arm's length in order to see the print.

"Father," she said, with a sigh, "I do wish the next time you go in to town you'd buy me a stronger pair of eyes."

"Huh," said father, who was a notoriously mean old countryman, "an eye's stronger than you need—its larger arm."—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Examining Old Art

Something was predicted by the ancient Egyptians, Chinese, and other nations. It was known in England in the time of the Romans. At Oxford in an old painted panel which belongs to King Alfred, and which, as appears by the inscription, was made by his order in the reign, about the year 875.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

LITTLEFIELD GETS RESULTS FOR A. L.

Friends of Raymond B. Littlefield say he once had intentions of following the profession of civil engineering as his life work. "Should he not have changed his mind," they say, "he would have been infinitely successful, for he is always engineering something or other to a successful completion."

The latest engineering feat to win him credit was the building of the department of Rhode Island of the American Legion into one of the strongest beams in the national structure of the Legion. This was done during his administration in 1924.

Legion work has been a particularly favorite objective for Mr. Littlefield's engineering genius. He began serving the Legion as a charter member.

Raymond B. Littlefield.

ber of James Stanton post of the Legion, Central Falls, R. I. He served in post offices until the big job came in 1923 when at the department convention he was elected department adjutant, which office he held for one year. Indication of his efficiency and popularity as a department adjutant is revealed by the incident of his election to the department commandery by acclamation at the department convention in August, 1924. He is at present serving as alternate national executive committee member.

The same gradual steps that took him from just a buck Legionnaire to the department commandery, he followed in the great adventure of 1917-1918. He enlisted in the Rhode Island National Guard on May 23, 1916, and served in that organization with ranks of private, corporal and sergeant. Then came the World war, and he went overseas with the Seventy-third Art. C. A. as a sergeant major, where he served in the line of advance. He was recommended for a commission when the armistice was signed.

Mr. Littlefield was born in 1895 at Central Falls, R. I., where he was educated in the public schools.

Stimulate Good Roads Movement

American Road Builders' Association Plans National Observance of "Good Roads Week" By Public Schools and Civic Clubs.

The American Road Builders' Association, one of the progenitors of the good roads movement in this country, is formulating plans for a "Good Roads Week" to be observed throughout the nation during the week of January 11, 1926.

It is planned that appropriate exercises be held in the public schools by "directing attention to the effect of good roads upon the progress of the nation. All civic clubs also will be asked to have appropriate exercises for "Good Roads Week." Rural districts will be asked to observe the week by community meetings at which the road requirements of the community will be discussed and plans for future development formulated.

While these good roads exercises and meetings are being held throughout the country and American Road Builders' Association will be holding its annual convention at Chicago, together with an exhibition containing more than 300 carloads of the latest and most improved road building equipment, machinery and materials, where road building officials, engineers and contractors may inspect the exhibits and hear the discussion with the intention of applying the latest methods to their local problems.

W. H. Council, president of the American Road Builders' Association and engineering executive of the Pennsylvania state department of highways, and Charles M. Upham, road builders' convention manager, have announced that the convention program at Chicago will be carried out in two divisions—one dealing with the actual construction of the roads, and of especial interest to contractors, and the other dealing with the technical and administrative problems of special interest to engineers and state, county and city officials.

While "Good Roads Week" is being observed throughout the country it is estimated that 40,000 people will attend the convention and exposition in Chicago. Special reduced railroad fares from all parts of the United States to Chicago will be in effect during that period.

The United States Bureau of Public Roads, which is taking the lead in road building activities throughout the country, will take a most prominent part in the convention and exposition at Chicago and will hold a special exhibit appropriate to "Good Roads Week" and the work of the bureau.

The convention and exposition, as well as the "Good Roads Week," will be held for the purpose of informing and educating those interested in road building in the latest methods and equipment for constructing roads successfully and economically. It is expected also to stimulate interest among the people generally.

When Greek Meets Greek

The phrase, "When Greek Meets Greek," when equal and great forces compete (a hard contest is to be expected), is derived from lines in Nathaniel Lee's "Alexander the Great." "When Greeks joined Greeks, then was the tug of war," an allusion to the contest between the Greek states and Philip and Alexander of Macedon, 357-355 B. C.—Literary Digest.

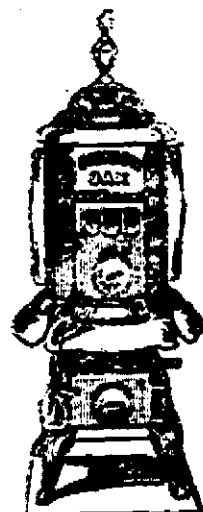

His Shirts Not Too Clean

The owner of a wireless installation was annoyed by the behavior of some boys of the neighborhood who disconnected his aerial. He wrote indignantly to the teacher of the school the culprits attended to complain of their conduct and to demand their punishment. "I would prosecute them," he wrote, "only I haven't got a license for my wireless."

DESCRIBES U. S. WONDERS IN 1638

Old Volume, Giving Impressions of New England 300 Years Ago, Uncovered.

Worcester, Mass.—A quaint volume, yellowed with age and of great rarity, giving impressions of New England as it was 300 years ago, in the days of the Pilgrims, has been uncovered in the library of the American Antiquarian society here.

The volume carries the title of "New England's Rarities Discovered," and was the work of John Josselyn of Kent, England, one of the earliest arrivals in New England. He is described on the flyleaf of the work as "John Josselyn, Gent."

The old volume bears the press imprint of the Green Dragon, in St. Paul's Churchyard, London, in 1672. In it the author, as the title has it, tells of the "birds, beasts, fishes, serpents and plants of that country, together with the physical and chyrurgical remedies which the natives constantly use to cure their distempers, wounds and sores."

Josselyn, a son Sir Thomas Josselyn, an aristocrat of Kent, visited New England in 1638, staying with his brother at Black Point in the colony of Massachusetts, "otherwise," as he puts it, "known as Scarborough and some 100 leagues east of Boston." It was during this visit of one year's duration and a subsequent one thirty years later that he obtained material for his "New England Rarities."

Boston a Handsome Town.

Josselyn found Boston to be "a town built on the southwest side of a bay large enough for the anchorage of 500 sail of ships."

"It's buildings," he wrote, "are handsome, joining one to the other as in London, with many large streets, most of them paved with pebble-stone."

"The town is not divided into parishes, yet they have three fair meeting houses, or churches, which hardly suffice to receive the inhabitants and strangers that come in from all parts."

After telling of the White mountains, "upon which lyeth snow all the year and are a landmark twenty miles off at sea," and of the country beyond them, which he thought "daunting terrible, being full of rocky hills, as thick as mole hills in a meadow and clothed with infinite thick woods," Josselyn launched into a discussion of birds, beasts, fishes, serpents, insects and plant life, much of which appeared to amaze him.

Amazed by "Turkie."

Josselyn seemed greatly impressed with the "turkie," as he called it, "a fowl blacker than ours." He wrote:

"I have heard several credible persons affirm they have seen turkie-cocks that weighed forty, yea sixty pound. But out of my personal experimental knowledge I can assure you that I have eaten my share of turkie that, when he was pulled, weighed thirty pound."

Josselyn once found a white goose which had three hearts, adding:

"She was a very old one and so tuff we gladly gave her over, although exceeding well roasted."

In his wanderings Josselyn came upon bears which "walk the country—twenty, thirty, forty in a company, making a hideous noise with roaring which you may hear for a mile or so before they come so near as to endanger the traveler."

Indians anointed themselves with the grease from the bearskins, he wrote, to "harden themselves against cold weather." And he recounted that one New Englander, who had taken cold after too copious libation "in a shallop or fisher-boat and who grew crooked, lame and full of pain, was cured by lying one winter upon bearskins."

Josselyn came upon gayly bedecked Indian squaws who evidently caught his artistic eye. He found the Indian men "somewhat horse-faced, and generally fawning, i. e., without beards; but the squaws, many of them handsome, dressed in colors and were generally plump as partridges."

Declares Man of Future Will Not Have to Shave

London.—Prof. A. M. Low, famous scientist, asserts that in all probability the man of the future will not have to shave and will most likely be bald. But that is not all. Among Professor Low's genial forecasts are the following:

Women will wear trousers. Incubators on the hire system will solve the difficulty of rearing children. Prettiest in women will be a drug on the market and rational birth control will free women for education. Foods will come from commercial kitchens in tubes. Complete triumph of radio communication in every department of life.

Professor Low is very sure of it all. And he does not think it is so very funny, either.

Prison for Matricide

Reco, Nev.—John H. Randolph, step-son of his seventy-three-year-old mother, was found guilty of murder in the first degree by a jury here and sentenced to death, which in this state means execution by lethal gas. Randolph beat his mother to death with his fist. He is the third man sentenced to death in lethal gas in Nevada. The two others have appeals pending.

New Shade of Red for Smart Costume

Dark, Rich Tone Is Scheduled to Appear in Stylish Autumn Garb.

The new bordeaux red—a very dark, rich tone—will appear in many smart costumes for early autumn, and it is singularly striking without being so obvious as to be barred from the ranks of the practical, says a Paris fashion correspondent in the New York Herald-Tribune. Premet has a new ensemble that makes use of this beautiful color and features the Premet line for the season. The dress is of bordeaux red faille with long, rather loose sleeves and a straight skirt plaited in back. The trimming on this dress consists of a double band of two-inch grosgrain ribbon, slightly lighter in tone, that is attached at the center front of the round neck and extends down to the waistline, where it passes beneath a cluster of flat floral motifs with embroidered edges that are cut from the silk. These motifs extend almost to the bottom of the skirt in two loose ends. Over this is worn a coat of red kasha natte with a band scarf collar that ties in the center front in a little bow. There are bands of the material across the tops of the shoulders, and the skirt of the coat is cut circularly from the waistline at the sides and recedes in a V in back to within ten inches of the hemline. The sleeves are long and quite tight.

Autumn will bring out many sports coats and simple suits of the novelty materials that are so new and so smart. O'Rosen is showing suits of these materials with full length coats that flare from the waistline at the sides. The flare is created by means of insets of the patterned materials, very scanty godets with the pattern running in reverse direction to the body of the coat. Plain or plaited skirts are worn with such coats. Sports capes, double and single, with fitted shoulders are shown by some of the leading houses. Molyneux shows some of these capes for wear with his hip-jacket suits for autumn. Cape and suit are of the same material, which is usually a patterned fabric showing chevrons, zigzag stripes or shadow plaids.

Flowers, which only a year ago were so fashionable, are hardly noticeable these days in Paris. Very studied trimmings are seen on the new hats, trimmings of lizards, ribbon, feathers or painting, but no flowers. Too masculine styles are also out of fashion. The dainty, feminine frock is the latest chic.

To Brighten Ebony

Sometimes ebony brushes and hand mirrors become dull in appearance. They can be improved considerably by rubbing in a little white vaseline with a soft piece of material until the wood has absorbed all the grease and has taken on a rich gloss.

Cuffed Sleeves Shown; Also High Waistline

Here is a model showing the high waistline which some authorities claim will be the fall mode. The costume pictured here is in blue mirror-satin, trimmed with chapeau, and showing the cuffed sleeves, one of the new notes in fashion.

Cotton Stockings Now

Paris Fashion Leader

Cotton stockings have returned! And the return has created a sensation in Paris. For, be it understood, these are not just ordinary cotton stockings. They are a glorious and extremely expensive article, and more expensive than all but the very sheerest silk ones. They are, too, inevitably, in beige. Every conceivable shade of beige, from deep coffee to palest champagne. These stockings take the dye beautifully in the first place, and retain their color well. They are especially designed for what the Parisienne calls "le footing," and are worn in the morning and even in the afternoon with tailored dresses.

Very thin, and marvelously soft, it is the clocks that are most striking. They are in wide openwork, six or eight rows of it, and often ornamented with a flat, smooth edition of the old French knot. Some have minute flowers embroidered up the sides instead—baby rosebuds, or forget-me-nots, or violets, in their proper colors.

THE WHY, WHEN AND WHERE OF FASHIONS. BUSTLES.

Eclipsing even the most important political events, word was sent out from Paris early in 1859 that Empress Eugenie dropped the hoop skirt. It died a slow but sure death afterward. First the hoops were omitted directly around the hips and the skirt was made to cling gradually more and more to the body. By 1868, the cage-like support of the hoop skirts, which netted its inventor 750,000 francs, went out of style entirely within four weeks.

The idea that yards and yards of material must be used for skirts was so fixed in the minds of people, that when the "crinoline" (as the cage support was called) was eliminated, the first thought was not to use less yardage but what to do with the great width of the skirt. The fulness of it was gradually gathered in and back and now, again, some artificial support of horsehair or wire was needed to uphold this "tour-nure," as the bustle was called in Paris.

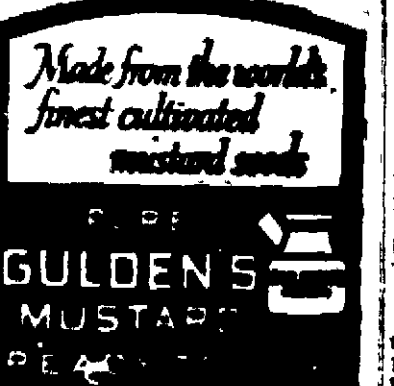

Extremes developed, as is always the case with fashions. It was not an extraordinary sight to see bustles 18 or 20 inches long and whereas 10 years before the legs were like clappers in a bell, now they were more and more tightly encased. By 1873 these tight-skirted bustle costumes were appropriately called "cul de Paris." They were so tight that women had to fasten their knees together and thus guard against a large step or quick movement which would have ripped the skirt open. (Fairchild Fashion Service.)

Care of Umbrellas

With a little care umbrellas will wear much longer. If ribs are oiled at the joints, they will not rust and break off. The oil should be applied carefully with a toothpick or a broom straw to prevent it from getting on the material which covers the umbrella. Wet umbrellas should be left open until completely dry to avoid cutting and discoloring.

Deductive Reasoning

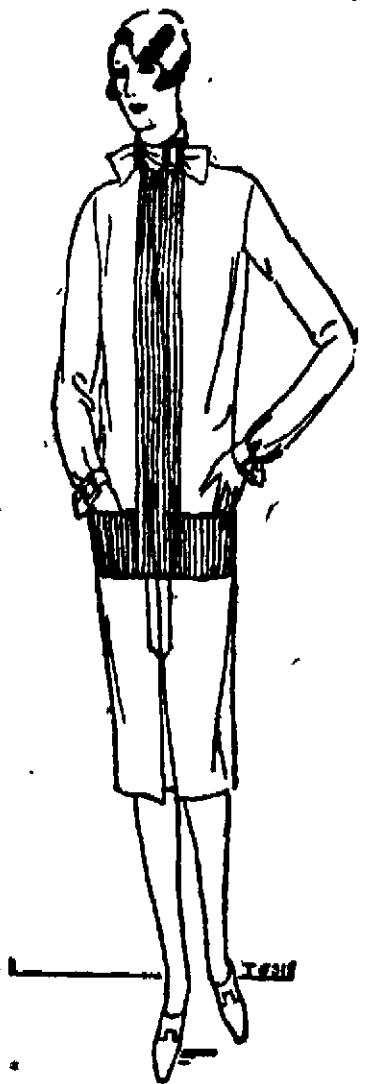

"I wonder who invented the radio?" asked Bobby. It was a deep question for Benny to answer, but he is the kind of boy who believes in taking a shot at anything. He doesn't believe in ever admitting that he is stumped so he replied promptly: "I don't remember his name exactly, but it was some guy who had to come in early."

SCHOOL DAYS ARE ALSO WOOL DAYS, WITH VELVETEEN NEAR THE HEAD OF THE CLASS.

Ring the bells that are calling our summer-tanned young things back to their studies in country and city. Rows of closely cropped heads soon will be bent over their desks, though thoughts are stealing away to lazy days at the seashore or mountain lakes.

What a glory of color brightens the school room this year! A scurry of autumn leaves must have blown within and settled there. Flecks of bright red dancing among the deep, rich mossy greens... golden tones to shine wherever darkness threatens... warm purples, wines, and oxblood browns... and the intensified blue of October's bright blue weather.

The Jumper Dress Has Grown a Stand-Up Collar.

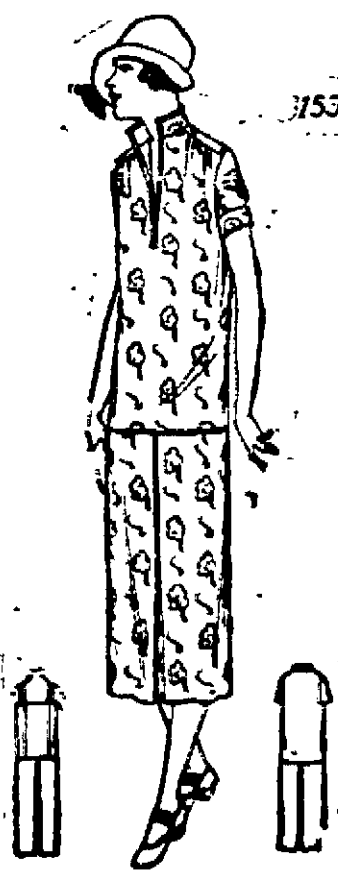

It is with difficulty that our young student conceals her pleasure and satisfaction in her new fall clothes. Fashion has decreed as fitting and proper for her, the same sophisticated inserts of fulness in skirt, the same clever touches at collar and sleeves that become so well her older sister.

Although jerseys were plentiful when she went to pick out her frocks, there were so many lovely soft woollens—new and becomingly tailored, fine twills, plaids, English tweed mixtures, and kasha-like fabrics. And then one had to have, of course, a velveteen—in spite of mother's feeling that it might not prove practical. Possibly mother was not aware that the out-of-door life that the velveteen leads blows it cleaner from school room dust than would many family whisks of the brush-broom.

Simplicity, yes—for it always goes hand in hand with youth, but saved this year from any hint of uniformity by the abundance of bright metallics, belts, buckles, and appliques which delight the soul of the young girl—and also, perchance, the outlook of the teacher.

Discussion on Traffic Problem

A. A. Head Stresses Importance of City Planning and Public Education and Deprecates Tendency to Depend on Temporary Expedients and Police Powers in Handling Traffic Problem.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 2.—If the country expects to make more rapid progress in the solution of the hazardous problem on the streets and highways, cities, towns and communities must tackle the safety question as primarily one of engineering and street planning on the one hand and of public education on the other.

This was the keynote of an address on "Safety and the Automobile," delivered by Thomas P. Henry, President of the American Automobile Association, before the annual congress of the National Safety Council in session in Cleveland.

President Henry issued a strong warning that the country must cease to depend on police powers and temporary regulations to solve the traffic problem and urged that safety work in the future be directed toward public education and city and community planning in the larger sense.

Problem Passes Police.

"All competent engineers with whom I have discussed the question are agreed that the problem of traffic and safety has long passed the point where it may be left to the police departments," President Henry declared.

He suggested three distinct lines along which community effort can be intelligently directed. He said:

"First, traffic and safety are practically synonymous, as far as accident prevention is concerned. Solve the problem of traffic congestion and you will have gone a long way toward the solution of your safety problem. I think this will be generally accepted as a fundamental truth. I am convinced that failure to accept it as such will lead us to waste much time on temporary expedients which, at the best, can only be expected to bring temporary relief.

"Second, of equal importance with the physical adaptation of our streets and highways to take care of the burden imposed on them, is the question of educating the people to the new conditions. This calls for an intensive educational campaign for 365 days each year. A safety instinct can be developed. America—and I mean all the people—is beginning to recognize that it is lacking sadly in safety sense and that only through intensive education in the development of additional protective instincts can the country walk and motor in safety.

"Third, While we are doing everything possible to promote physical improvements in our streets and highways and to develop safety instinct through education, we must not overlook the practical things that we can do here and now. I mean by that, reasonable regulation of traffic both as regards the automobile and the pedestrian. This includes such adjuncts as adequate traffic control forces, adequate signaling devices, proper marking of highways, an intelligent system of protection at railroad grade crossings and other details of practical control."

City Planners Dormant.

Speaking of the extent to which city planning is lagging behind the increase in automobiles and therefore in congestion, President Henry pointed out that in only 25 per cent of 223 cities from which reports were recently received have any traffic counts at all been made from the broader aspects and yet nearly half the cities reporting have dormant city planning commissions.

"I sometimes fear that the smaller cities will repeat the tragedy of the larger ones unless they learn their lesson from the experience of the others."

He continued:

"When the cities were confronted with growing traffic problems a few years ago, the police departments assumed charge. The congestion was slight compared to what it is now and regulatory measures were simple—and seemingly effective. In most cases, while the engineers feel that the traffic problem is really an engineering problem, they find that it is still in the hands of the police department. Traffic rules, one-way streets, signal towers—they worked at the beginning, and apparently the prevailing theory is that as traffic congestion increases, all that is needed is simply more rules, more one-way streets and more signal towers—and bigger traffic courts."

Engineering Ability Needed.

"The police officials and their advisers in many of the large cities have used commendable ingenuity and patience in untangling traffic tangles and inventing schemes for preventing them. But the end of such measures is near—what is now needed is engineering ability and not police power."

"When the cities and their traffic commissions begin to find that the traffic problem cannot be solved by putting drivers in jail, they will turn their attention to the streets."

Because of the very wide belief in legislative cure-alls, Mr. Henry warned the Safety Council of the serious danger of over-regulation of the automobile and the consequent diminution of its value as a great instrument of transportation.

Fewer Laws, More Enforcement.

"I think all of us," he said, "have been in the habit of thinking too much in terms of legislation. In fact, that is a concurrent tendency in the American body politic—to look to Congress, state legislatures and municipal bodies for statutes and ordinances to do this and that. We have the legislative complex and I am not at all sure that the 'complex' has not already over-regulated the automobile and the motorist. What we need is better enforcement of the

All Except Four States Tax Gas

Gasoline Tax Yields Revenue of Over Sixty Million Dollars in First Half of Present Year—Tax Ranges From One to Five Cents Per Gallon.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Oct. 2 (Special).—Gasoline taxes collected by the several states yielded a revenue of $60,108,734 in the first half of 1925 of which $53,814,240 is applicable to road work, according to a report by the Bureau of Public Roads of the United States Department of Agriculture. At the beginning of the year there were 13 states which did not tax gasoline. At the present time a tax is imposed in all states except Illinois, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York. On July 1 the tax per gallon was five cents in one state, four cents in two states, 3½ cents in one state, three cents in twelve states, 2½ cents in one state, two cents in 23 states and one cent in five states.

The rates of taxation on June 30 and the revenue derived in the first six months of 1925 were as follows:

Gasoline Demand

One year's consumption of gasoline in China would not run the automobiles of the United States eight hours. In this country the per capita consumption of gasoline is 69.3 gallons a year; England, in second place, used 11.6 gallons.

To supply the demand, American production of gasoline was increased from 1,000,000,000 gallons in 1914 to 9,000,000,000 gallons in 1924. The United States accounted for 79 per cent of the world's consumption last year, while at the same time exporting $100,000,000 worth of the commodity.

Stone Woodpecker's Nest

A constant, mysterious pecking that annoyed people in the Farmer's union office in Waldo, Kan., was finally located inside a heating stove that had been left standing, says the Topeka Capital. When the door was opened out popped a red-headed woodpecker, badly discolored from soot, but still game. The bird had evidently come down into the stove through the pipe, and the pecking noise came from his efforts to bore through to liberty. When released he flew to a telephone pole, got his bearings and then headed straightway for the nearest woods.

To Use Electric "Mules"

Electric mules are going to work in English freight stations to make the work for the porters easier. For some time past these industrial power trucks have been used in the great English passenger terminals just as they have been in the stations of this country. At present, however, a movement is on foot in the British Institute of Transport favoring the introduction of the same equipment for eliminating the back-breaking jobs incident to handling heavy packages, bales, etc.

It is good to know that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has brought permanent relief to thousands of sufferers from constipation.

When ALL-BRAN travels through the system, its fiber remains unchanged. Therefore, it can sweep the intestine clean. It can absorb and carry moisture through the intestinal tract and stimulate it to natural, healthy action; ALL-BRAN is what doctors call a bulk food.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is delightful with milk or cream, sprinkled over other cereals; cooked with hot cereals; in soups.

Bismarck Not Afraid of His Royal Master

German Emperor's visit was said, direct from the royal columns in Vienna, after the World War. This was the first time since the war that the royal family had been seen in public. The great folk, who had been so often made to see the Emperor, were now to see the Emperor's son, the Crown Prince, and his wife, the Duchess of Brunswick. The Emperor's son, the Crown Prince, was to be seen in public for the first time since the war. The Emperor's son, the Crown Prince, was to be seen in public for the first time since the war.

to Bismarck at dinner, with "old Wiliam" not far away. A good deal to Hamlet's discomfort. Bismarck persisted in talking about his master in a very loud voice, saying, among other things, that he was generous but forgetful. "For instance," he pleaded his case the other day, and he promised me a dozen of that Tokay he has in his cellar, but I haven't had it. "Really," said poor Hamlet, "I'm afraid he'll hear what you're saying." "Afraid?" roared Bismarck, "I want him to hear me; that's just what I want!"

Comments of the French Press

By Telegraph to The Freeman
Paris, Oct. 2.—A pall of gloom hung over official circles today, after the results of the Franco-American debt negotiations had been thoroughly studied.
Financial circles were confident that the French parliament would reject the temporary settlement. It was characterized in financial circles as "an American demand for tribute." It was pointed out that the $10,000,000 annual payments will not reduce the French debt to America and therefore the French Legislature is not likely to approve.
Another question which worries Paris is where and how M. Caillaux intends to raise $10,000,000 for payment every year for five years.
Press comment, however, was generally philosophical.
L. Courvoisier, which has been pessimistic regarding a final accord, remarked:
"Certainly the rupture is a serious thing, but it is preferable to an unsupportable burden on the shoulders of France for generations to come."
The Journal expressed the feeling that France was mistress of her own fate and that America can do nothing to affect France economically.
Eclair said:
"America is trying to propose slavery with her 'gold imperialism'."
"Our answer, in the loudest voice is 'no'."

Mr. Bonanno has already taken charge of the grocery business and both parties will move in their new homes in the near future.

Wax Effigies of the Dead

It was once the curious custom in England to carry wax effigies of the dead—if they were distinguished enough—in their funeral processions. It was also customary to leave the effigies near the grave for some time thereafter, and the mourning friends of the deceased used to compose elegiac rhymes and lamentations and similar productions, which they would write out on paper and pin to the clothing of the effigy. A number of the quaint old effigies are still preserved at Westminster abbey, where they are stored in the little chapel, and one at least, that of Frances, duchess of Richmond, is still to be seen beside her grave in Henry VII's chapel.—Family Herald.

Chicago's Nicknames

Chicago has two nicknames. The "windy city" is an allusion to the high winds that prevail there, as well as to the general breeziness of the business and social atmosphere that characterizes it. Its other nickname is "Porkopolis," meaning "City of Pork," and refers to the enormous trade in hogs that is carried on in Chicago and the numerous pork and meat establishments that are one of the distinguishing features of the city.

Being Too Good a Loser

"When you meet a luckless fellow all right and to let him know it. But this business of being a good loser can be carried too far. You can go in the habit of losing. You can reach yourself to a loss and then the next time something happens your plans, you sort of take it for granted. Finally you get so you expect loss. And we usually get what we expect."—Harry A. Stewart in the American Mag.

POULTRY FACTS

FALL REMINDERS OF FARM FLOCKS

The past few months have been our dull months with chickens. About all we could do was to raise a flock of good pullets for winter egg production. Any man who has tried raising poultry knows that the last few months have called for extra effort on our part. But the time will soon be here when we are going to reap what we have been sowing, writes J. W. Recknor, Jr., in the Farm and Ranch. The pullets will shell out the eggs and the price will soar higher as cold weather comes on. Our dull months, you see, have been our hard-working months. But to reap what is due us we must not lay down on the job now as cool weather approaches. The thing to do is to get everything in the best shape possible to clean up some cash this winter. The merchant puts his store in the best shape possible, cleans up and improves as much as he can, so as to be prepared for the fall business. Here is where his profits pile up. During the dull season he gets by, perhaps, but he counts on the business this fall for extra profits.

Clean up the old store. That is, cull out the nonproducers from the flock. Get rid of the drones. Keep nothing on the yards except money-makers. Turn all the shoddy goods to the market man, and hit the fall and winter months with a flock of healthy, vigorous bread-winners that bring in the dough. If you have a large flock and you are afraid to do the culling, then get the assistance of some one who has had some experience. It pays to cull. You get the same number of eggs on less feed and house room. The nonlayers eat up your profits and crowd the producers. Get rid of them.

If you are not feeding the birds as you should, get them on a good ration at once, as the pullets must be in condition to lay. If you have bred-to-day chickens and you have done your part in keeping the pullets growing all summer and you continue to give them the right kind of attention, you need not fear but what you will be rewarded this fall and winter with a heavy egg production. Feeding right has much to do with a laying hen. She can't lay unless her food contains all the elements that go to make up an egg, and in the right proportions at that. An egg ration will have to be fed through the winter. It might pay to look into your feeding methods. Sometimes, by doing this, a mistake can be detected before it is too late.

Handling of Pullets in Autumn Requires Skill

No one thing requires more skill than the correct handling of a flock of pullets so that a maximum yield of eggs may be obtained all winter. First of all, the birds must be fat, as this gives them the necessary strength and endurance. To have them fat, large quantities of hard grain must be fed. Three-fourths of the food they consume should be hard grain. It is not as important during the latter part of their development that they have as much mash as when ready to lay. If milk is fed, very little mash is necessary. They should have plenty of green food at all times.

When the first eggs are found on the range, at least one-third or one-half of the birds best developed should be placed in their winter quarters. If the birds are allowed to remain very long on the range after starting to lay, the change to winter houses is sure to check them and may cause a fall molt. When the remaining birds show maturity, they should be put in winter quarters also.

Caution in Culling Is Urged by a Poultryman

Practically every rule has its exception. "Early molting birds are poor layers," say experienced poultrymen. This is true in the main, but there are exceptions.

N. E. Chapman, poultryman with the agricultural extension service, University of Minnesota, points out that many farm flocks went into a premature molt early in June because of lack of feed, hot poultry houses at night, and depredations of mice. Egg production by these flocks fell off rapidly, but as sufficient feed is supplied and poultry houses properly ventilated and the mice exterminated, the flocks are gradually increasing production.

"When culling such flocks, each hen should be carefully studied for evidence that the molt is about to subside," says Mr. Chapman. "The best hens will come back and they ought to have their chance. The poorest ones will, of course, continue to molt and should be discarded."

Balanced Dry Mash

The use of a balanced dry mash containing 2 per cent ground limestone in addition to the proper amount of water will usually prevent the production of soft-shelled eggs. A failure of the egg-making organs to function properly might cause soft-shelled eggs. Such hens have to be located by the trap nest or by observation in small flocks. Then they can be marketed and replaced with vigorous pullets which will probably be free from such trouble.

Of English Origin

The word "junior" is derived from the Latin word "junior," meaning "younger." It was first applied to a group of White politicians in the reigns of Mary and Ann of England, and has come to mean "a secret conference," especially a political one.

British May Ask France for More

By Telegraph to The Freeman
London, Oct. 2.—Great Britain may ask France to raise her ante, as the result of the temporary truce over debts arranged with the United States, it was stated semi-officially today.

Officials said that if the French chamber agrees to the payment of $40,000,000 annually to the United States for a period of five years, that it is to be expected that Great Britain will demand that France increase her payments during the ten years' partial moratorium provided in the tentative Anglo-French debt settlement.

The Churchill-Caillaux agreement provides for a ten year partial moratorium and British official opinion is that if France can stand up on a five year moratorium with the United States, she can lessen the period of her moratorium with Great Britain, or she can increase the size of her payments during the ten year period.

RUSSO-GERMAN TRADE TREATY SIGNED BY GERMANY

By Telegraph to The Freeman
Berlin, Oct. 2.—The German cabinet today decided to sign a Russo-German trade treaty.

This treaty, which has been engineered and negotiated by M. Tschitcherine, Russian foreign minister, may endanger the security pact negotiations at Lucerne. International News Service learns that the preamble of the treaty is such that Germany cannot enter the League of Nations, except upon conditions. The full nature of these conditions is as yet undisclosed but they may prove objectionable to the Allies.

Walsh Gives Washington Trifling Edge

Which is Hardly Worth Considering In a Short Series—Odds on Either Club Entirely Without Justification.

(By Davis J. Walsh.)

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
New York, Oct. 2.—A general round-up of respective assets and liabilities brings home rather forcibly the fact that the Pirates and Senators are two of the most evenly matched world series combinations of many years.

The ultimate show-down seems to give the Senators an edge, but it is so slight that it is hardly worth considering for a short series. It is only over a long season of play that a discrepancy between the capabilities of any given teams can begin to show returns.

Senators Have Edge.

As far as defense is concerned, Washington would seem to carry the verdict. The Pirates may be said to enjoy a meagre advantage in the all-important matter of pitching, largely because the Senators' left-handers do not figure to be particularly effective against Pirate hitters. However, the advantage is wiped out immediately by the fact that Washington's catchers should handle their pitching to better effect, and that the Senatorial infield should support this pitching with greater adequacy and steadiness.

Defensively, the Pirates have a real lead over the Senators only in the outfield and this fact is of negligible value. Games, of course, often are won and lost in the outfield but not as many times as in the infield, behind the bat or in the box.

Equal on Defense.

So much for defense. On attack, there is little to choose between the contenders, both of which can muster a team average of .300, amplified by speed on the bases. The Pirates have more real speed than the Senators, yet there is not much difference between their base stealing records. These, however, do not always show the actual speed of a club.

Neither do the hitting averages, which show more Pirates than Senators in the .300 class. However, men like Stanley and Joe Harris, Peckinpaw and Scott uncover their actual value in the hits they make in the pinches. There is probably as much punch in the Senatorial attack as the Pirates can summon.

All in all, it looks like the closest series of a dozen years with odds on either entry entirely without justification. In fact, no world series odds ever are justified. The breaks always have decided the winner of a short series and probably always will do so.

COFFEY IS MATCHED TO FIGHT JORDON

Tommy Jordan, who gave Young "Nick" Testa, Troy welterweight, the greatest fight of his young career last Monday night at the Troy Stadium, has been obtained by the Collier City A. C. to go against Vince Coffey, local welterweight, in the feature bout of twelve rounds at next week's show. Jordan was signed after Testa reported he had injured his hand.

Jordan holds a victory over Sergeant Sammy Baker and recently held Paul Doyle of New York to a smashing twelve round draw. He is a stiff puncher and a good two handed fighter.

Coffey has been going like a house afire since he took the game seriously and settled down to business. He defeated Patry Motto and since he left these parts has beaten such stars as Harry Martone, Willie Harmon, Jimmy Amato and Jimmy Francis.

Grange's Injury Not Serious.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Chaplin, Ill., Oct. 2.—Captain Red Grange's injured wrist is not expected to give him trouble in the game with Nebraska tomorrow. Grange threw a few passes today, apparently as well as ever.

When a Pie is a Meal

A pie is a meal, according to the decision of the Glasgow magistrates' committee. A licensed restaurateur was recently charged with having supplied liquor to three men between 9 p. m. and 10 p. m. without a meal being supplied at the time. For the defense it was stated that each of the men was supplied with a pie, and it was contended that this constituted a meal. The stipendiary decided in favor of the respondents.—London Mail.

Big Demand for Series Tickets

Accommodating the Crowds Is the Only Real Problem of the World Series—Hawlings Will Not Be in Lineup.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

New York, Oct. 2.—Bringing home the world series is not without its tribulations, as Clark Griffith and Barney Dreyfus have discovered to their discomfort.

The day their teams clinched the pennant, Clark and Barney were little playmates to the whole world. But the day after, when they began returning requests for tickets, the whole outlook was changed. Barney Dreyfus has been called names before. And by experts. But not until a week ago did Barney really learn what public opinion could do.

Under the new arrangement of seats the Pirates may be able to take care of 48,000 at a game. Washington, with a bit smaller park, can care for only 40,000. That means 264,000 fans can be accommodated in a six game series. And fully three times that many want to go. Truly, it's a tough life.

The matter of accommodating the crowds, however, has come to be the only real problem of the series. A few weeks ago Clark Griffith and Bucky Harris had the additional worry of injuries and incapacities. But the hospital list has been eliminated. Word from Washington gives assurance that Johnson, Peckinpaw and Stanley Harris all will be in shape.

The Pirates, of course, will be minus the services of Johnny Rawlings—but Wright and others, who have been a bit under the weather, are entirely recovered. Rawlings' loss is no mean item. There's no better money player in all baseball than little Johnny, as his work with the Giants in 1922 will testify and McKeeble had counted on him to help in keeping the Pirate kid infield steady down. Now that's out—but McKeeble isn't worrying particularly. He has a lot of faith in his kids.

It is doubtful if any world series in history has attracted more attention than this one—not even that hectic Giants-Senator battle last fall. No attendance records will be broken—but that's only because a record crowd cannot be accommodated.

Wonder of Nature

A feather, one of the world's most perfect structures, has been growing perfect for possibly a million years, says Capper's Weekly. A single plume from an eagle's wing has nearly a million different parts. The whole wing is a sail that strikes the wind firmly yet elastically, not letting the air get through the web, and yet not being broken. It enormously increases the bird's power of rising in the air, and yet how little it adds to weight.

K. H. S. Grid Team Vs. Stuyvesant

The K. H. S. football outfit will find no soft snap Saturday afternoon when they begin warfare with the Stuyvesant High School eleven, from New York. The New York school has established a reputation for turning out strong elevens and this season they are developing an unusually husky aggregation. This down-state eleven began practice a week earlier than the local team and Saturday's contest is their first battle of the season. It has been stated that from twenty-five to thirty "rooters" will accompany the squad.

Coch O'Leary drilled the squad in all sorts of trick plays and snappy formations Thursday afternoon at the Athletic Field. He was also giving special drill in passing with the assistance of Fred Meachon, former Dartmouth football star who is helping the local mentor. This afternoon the squad will be put through a light workout.

Officers of Letter Club.

A meeting of the Varsity Letter Club was called Monday afternoon and the following officers were elected: Leverett, president; Scanlon, vice president; Sahloff, secretary; Phelps, treasurer. To be eligible for membership in this organization a student must have won a varsity letter in some branch of the school activities.

BASKETBALL JAMBOREE PLANNED AT "Y" THIS YEAR

A new plan of a Senior opening night at the local Y. M. C. A. will be tried out this year. It will be called a basketball jamboree and will be open to all basketball players in the city who are over 18 years of age. The date is Monday, October 13, and the time from 5 to 11 p. m.

A special committee has been working on the details of the plan which in brief is as follows:

1. The jamboree is open to all players whether holding membership in the Y. M. C. A. or not.
2. All players attending will be placed on a basketball team and will play in at least two games.
3. Players will be arranged (by committee) according to their strength and then drawn to form teams.
4. An elimination basketball tournament will be held beginning 5 p. m. on Monday, October 13.
5. A consolation round will be held among all teams losing during the first round and the winner of this round to go back in the main tournament.
6. A banquet will be held at the close of the tournament for which a small charge will be made. A ticket to the banquet must be secured in order to take part in the jamboree.
7. Entertainment and speeches will be held at the close of the banquet.

Prizes (?) will be awarded to the winners of the final basketball game.

The committee in charge promises all who sign up that they will guarantee them an excellent time, plenty of basketball and many a good laugh during the evening.

Tickets to the jamboree can be secured from the committee in charge: Robert Murray, chairman; Wesley Thompson, Tom Newland and Odell Black or from the physical director of the Y.

Old Reliable

Sam Rice is no longer a youngster, but in every department of the game the Senators' guardian of right field is right up among the elite.

E. A. ALWARDT WINS PRIZE WITH 189 SCORE

The Y. M. C. A. bowling alley opened with a bang. A large crowd was on hand Thursday evening to inspect and use the alleys and bowling continued from the time the alleys opened at 7 until 11 o'clock.

The sterling silver medal which was offered for the highest score of the evening was hotly contested for and won by E. A. Alwardt with a score of 189. First one, bowler would lead and then his score would be raised by another bowler but this did not stand for long for someone else would beat that score by a few pins.

The following bowlers gave Alwardt a close race for the prize:

D. Harris	179
J. Smith	178
J. Reed	176
P. Jordan	175

All bowlers were well pleased with the condition of the alleys,

Need Clinics for Reckless Drivers

Secretary Hoover to Call Conference
Which Will Consider Recommendations to Establish Accident Investigation Bureau—Some Lawyers Have Recommended Action.

Official clinics to examine reckless drivers were recommended by the committee on causes of accidents of the National Conference on Road and Highway Safety at a meeting in advance of the Second National Conference with Secretary of Commerce Hoover as chairman will call this winter. The committee believes there is a group of automobile drivers who are prone to accidents, due to their mentality, their habits, and their attitude toward the rights of others.

The cause of accidents committee, of which Dr. Walter V. Bingham of New York is chairman, believes that in large centers of population there should be an accident investigation bureau whose official staff shall include a medical examiner with psychiatric experience, a psychologist, a traffic engineer, and a statistician. Persistent violators of reckless driving regulations and drivers who figure in repeated accidents might well be referred to such a clinic by the traffic court magistrate for examination. Such examinations, the committee declares, would aid the court in handling such offenders, would be useful to officials in charge of regulation or suspension of licenses and would reveal to the driver himself remediable defects and handicaps. Dr. Bingham reported that such an investigation clinic is actually being tried out in Boston and that the examinations have already revealed cases of drivers suffering from afflictions which sooner or later would cause them to lose control of their cars.

What Records Show.

While discussing the need of uniform record cards, the committee brought out the fact that in one state the use of such cards showed that in 1924 more than 90 per cent of the accidents were directly traced to reckless drivers. The committee stressed the need for specially selected police or traffic officers trained as accident investigators to carry through a detailed inquiry as to conditions concerning an accident.

Information on Vital Facts.

Few accidents can be attributed to a single cause. It was pointed out, for example, the fact of slight outstanding circumstances being present frequently in accidents. There are nearly always several almost equally vital circumstances which must be considered to secure a complete understanding of the causes. In order to get a complete picture, facts must deal with:

Just what happened and what conditions prevailed at the time of the accident.

Other conditions, such as the driver's fatigue or other mental preoccupations, his experience, his habits of ascending to brakes and lights, his familiarity with the particular car he was driving.

Facts about the persons involved as revealed by medical, psychological, and psychiatric examination, as well as information as to the attitude of the community whose standards influence the behavior of the individual involved.

As yet, the committee has found only a start has been made in getting such information, although valuable beginnings have been made by Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York and Wisconsin, as well as a number of cities.

The committee is also making studies of information gathered about accidents in mechanical pursuits, it having been pointed out that in industrial plants most accidents happen in a small group.

Would Save Re-Testing.

Tests for prospective drivers, the discussions showed, should be divided into four classes. By such a division it would be easy with the results of the ordinary driver's test, which was conducted by Dr. J. Woodard Cornell of New York, would not the country at large eliminate a year.

For the 20,000,000 or more drivers of automobiles, the committee suggested that there should be some tests which would reveal a knowledge of the traffic law, psychological tests which could be given to a number of persons at the same time, and limited driving tests.

The drivers who made low ratings in such a test for three or four years would be re-tested, and the rest would be re-tested at intervals of one year. The committee also suggested that the tests should be given to all drivers at the time of their first test, and that the results should be given to the driver and the public.

Dr. Bingham also suggested that the tests should be given to all drivers at the time of their first test, and that the results should be given to the driver and the public.

Aid for Armenian Refugees

The National Armenian Relief Council has announced that it has received a grant of $100,000 from the United States Government to aid in the relief of Armenian refugees.

The grant will be used to provide food, clothing, and shelter for the refugees, and to pay the expenses of the relief work.

The National Armenian Relief Council is a non-profit organization which has been working for the relief of Armenian refugees since 1918.

The council has a large staff of workers who are active in the relief work, and it has a wide network of branches throughout the world.

The council is grateful for the grant from the United States Government, and it hopes that it will be able to provide more aid to the refugees in the future.

Fletcher, N. C.—Five memorials to Edgar Wilson ("Bill") Nye, grouped about his last resting place in the heart of the Blue Ridge mountains at Fletcher, were formally dedicated.

These reminders of the famous humorist include a memorial window in old Calvary Episcopal church; a bronze tablet marking his grave in the churchyard; a monument on which a bronze tablet tells a brief story of his life, on the Hendersonville-Asheville highway; a memorial flagstaff, the gift of the city of Asheville; and a memorial shelter, erected by the Masonic fraternity of Asheville.

WILL SHOW MODEL HOME AT FEDERATION CONVENTION

Plans for the Annual Convention of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held in Rochester in November, are beginning to show interesting aspects to those formulating them.

Rochester women making the local arrangements for the convention, as well as the president, Mrs. Charles M. Dickinson of Binghamton, the other officers and chairmen of departments, are considering enterprises which will make the Rochester gathering unique as compared with previous conventions in the history of the Federation.

One of the features which will be a big drawing card for women from rural and urban clubs will be a model home to be set up by the Better American Homes Department.

It is planned to borrow a model home of six to eight rooms and to have it furnished by Rochester stores. Mrs. Charles Gregory of New Rochelle, chairman of the Better Homes Department, who is supplying the specifications for the furnishing of the home, requires that it be perfect in its kitchen equipment and labor-saving devices, and provide good music and books, but that the furniture shall not represent large expenditure and shall be the acme of good taste.

Too Many Words Are Given New Meanings

One wonders where language will bring up one of these days. Every new dictionary is thicker than the last. Is it that there are too many new words, or is it that people are using words in so many various ways that note has to be taken of all of them?

There are a few newspapers that are still sticklers for the use of words. One of them, for instance, will not permit any of its writers to use the word "secure" for "obtain." The newspaper is right and yet it seems to be dipping back the sea with a teaspoon as against the flood of use. More people, more newspapers appear to be using "secure" where they mean "obtain" than otherwise. The lexicon makers have surrendered to use and they have listed "secure" as meaning "obtain." So it goes. Many more words are being used in their figurative sense until the usage becomes matter of fact.

Too Busy to Notice Rats

One of the most interesting warpage stories in England is at Kingston-on-Thames, passed every day, often with great notice, by hundreds of cars. It is the station convention scene, in which it is said, nine of the party station kings who reigned in England before the Conqueror were crowned.
